

Global Airline Market Report 2025

The global airline industry in 2025 is marked by recovery and transition. Air travel demand has rebounded, surpassing pre-pandemic levels. However, airlines face challenges in fuel costs and sustainability pressures.

Regional differences are stark: Asia-Pacific demand is booming, while European carriers are squeezed by rail competition. North American airlines benefit from consolidation and strong domestic demand.

The future will see sustainability shaping investment, from biofuels to next-gen aircraft.